WHAT SETS US APART

- We identify your employer brand not with generic terms like best, top, great, or excellent, but with happiness, the ultimate goal for everyone.
- Our measurement tool is grounded in the latest neuroscience research, moving beyond outdated questionnaires from over 30 years ago that no longer reflect the realities of today's business environment.
- We deliver a comprehensive analysis through an interactive online report, complemented by a detailed presentation designed to meet the expectations of senior management.
- We maintain continuous engagement and preserve a human touch throughout our interactions.

In a nutshell, we are up-to-date.

OUR MODEL

Our neuroscience-based model reveals that employee happiness is rooted in the workplace experience—specifically their interactions with work, team, leaders, and the workplace environment. These interactions create feelings of success, pride, and trust, which are crucial for happiness.

Success is linked to dopamine and is felt when employees fully utilize their potential in meaningful work, see the results of their efforts, and are provided with conditions for continuous improvement.

Pride is associated with serotonin and arises when accomplishments are recognized and appreciated by leaders, and celebrated by coworkers.

Trust is associated with oxytocin and stems from the personalized attention leaders show their employees, alongside strong colleague relationships, a cooperative environment, and a reputable brand, enhancing a sense of security and belonging.
